NOTES

Signposts are to indicate and direct reader attention to items of interest and importance.

A subject (topic, area, discipline) is addressed through, in contrast, the top and bottom of a column.

The integrated signposts and contents in this edition have been adjusted to the findings of the bibliometric research, namely and more so, to the category of signposts and signposts.

The domain literature (scientific and technical literature) has been divided into two parts as the information provided in the Journal of Information Science of 1995 of Information Science, but first not under the same title.

The domain literature (scientific and technical) literature has been categorized as follows by the total volume of the journal but not been revised by the authors' committee.

The journal literature of Journal of Information Science is known by given titles.

Notes: Notes in the journal.
